$$\sum_i x_i > \sum_i y_i \rightarrow \checkmark$$

Object of the Game

The player, who brings all tiles of his color into the board first, wins.

Game Elements

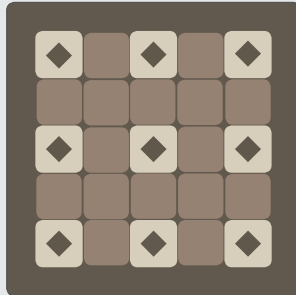

16 tiles of pear wood (red-brown)

$$\sum_i x_i < \sum_i y_i \rightarrow \times$$

$$\sum_i x_i = \sum_i y_i \rightarrow \times$$

Preparation

Each player chooses one color out of the dark and bright tiles. Before you start the game, place all red-brown tiles on the board filling the spaces between the fixed tiles.

The Game

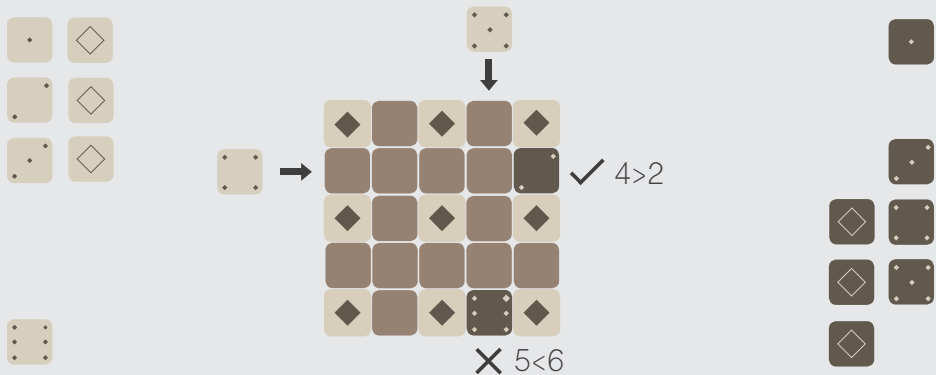

The player with the bright tiles begins. If you are the first player insert one of your tiles anywhere on the board regardless of the direction. The red-brown tile, pushed out of the board, is taken out of the game. Now it is the second player's turn. Insert one of your tiles on the board. If there is an opponent's tile in the selected row, you are only allowed to insert your tile, if the sum of your pips including the pips of the chosen tile, is higher than the opponents sum in that row. Blank tiles have the value zero and do not increase the sum of the pips. The game continues in this manner.

If a player's tile is pushed out of the game during a turn, it must be taken back by the player of the respective color and brought back into the game. Every player is compelled to move, which might mean you are forced to push out one of your own tiles and take it back.

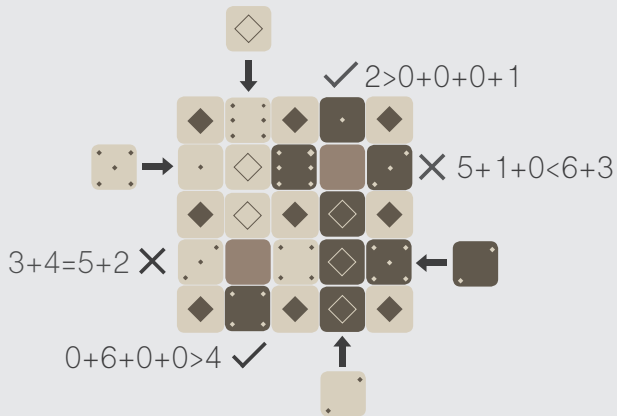

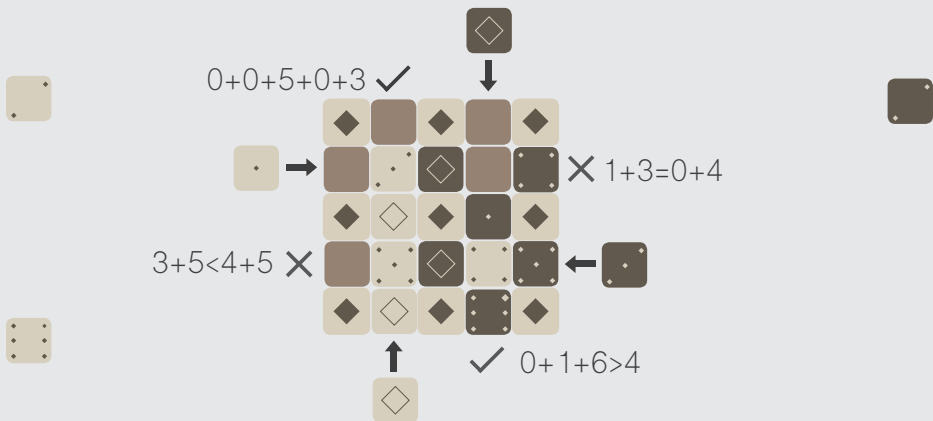

End of Game

If you insert the last tile on the board, you win and end the game.
